

THE DAILY SENTINEL. PUBLISHED BY RUFUS KING & CO. Friday Morning, June 1, 1855.

FROM OUR AUSTRALIA CORRESPONDENT. BARRISTER-AT-LAW, COLONY OF VICTORIA, February 3, 1855.

It is hard to tell what they expect to gain by taking up arms against the government—they could not for a moment have expected to be successful. Some have said their intention was to raise a regular rebellion and separate from the mother country; but the men engaged in it were mostly ignorant and probably they were not one tenth what the best of the militia would be.

These colonies will some day become a great independent nation every one knows, and perhaps the day of separation is not far distant; but when it does come the separation will be a peaceful one, and it is thought that the home government is fully prepared for the question of separation, for the subject has been open for some time.

I am sorry to say that everything at present here looks very gloomy. The day of separation is not far distant, and it is thought that the home government is fully prepared for the question of separation, for the subject has been open for some time.
